YOUR TARGET HEART RATE

At least once during the cardiovascular section of your workout, you should check your target heart rate. Gently place two fingers against your wrist or the carotid artery in your neck, and feel for your pulse. Count your pulse for a period of 10 seconds. For best cardiovascular results, your heart rate should fall within the range shown below for your age group.

| Age   | Target Heart Rate(Beats per 10 seconds) |
|-------|---|
| 15-19 | 21-28                                       |
| 20-27 | 21-27                                       |
| 28-36 | 20-26                                       |
| 37-45 | 19-25                                       |
| 46-53 | 18-24                                       |
| 54-62 | 17-23                                       |
| 63-70 | 16-22                                       |

If your heart rate is above this range, lower your intensity by working off your step or not using your arms. If your heart rate is below this range, pick up the pace a little bit by using your arms or raising the height of your step, if your step is adjustable.
